ELIMINATES SELF; PROHIBITION BILL TO CAUSE DISPUTE

Former Vice President Makes Statement to Press Today; Curtis Now Appears as Certainty; Sub-Committee Studies Wet Plank Throughout Night

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Definitely eliminating himself from the vice-presidential nomination, Gen. Charles G. Dawes declared flatly today he could not accept the nomination if it were offered.

Dawes issued his statement after a perusal of the morning newspapers reporting the boom in his favor at Chicago for second place on the Republican ticket.

He said he had not been offered the Vice-Presidency and that he could not accept it in any event. His statement follows:

"The situation in the convention as to the vice-presidential nomination, as reported by the press this morning, would seem to call for a more expressive statement of my attitude.

CONSIDERS HONOR
"To have been considered for this nomination is a high honor and I appreciate the proffers of support. I have given the question consideration and thought. I could not accept the nomination if made."

Dawes' statement was considered here as the final gun brought up by administration leaders to stop the raid on the Curtis supporters at Chicago. Dawes has not been at the White House for several days, but whether he had been in telephonic contact with the president could not be ascertained.

CONGRESSMAN SEEKS ACTION ON GRAIN BILL

Mell Underwood Would Provide For Distribution of More U. S. Wheat.

MAKES STATEMENT
Would Use Legion, Red Cross and Charities.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 15.—Congressman Mell G. Underwood, of the 11th District, has urged upon Congress, the necessity of enacting his wheat relief bill before adjournment. His bill now pending, provides distribution of an additional 50,000,000 bushels of the surplus wheat held by the Federal Farm Board.

The Underwood Bill provides a different method of distribution than that heretofore followed. The wheat would be released upon application of the Governors of the various States, for distribution through local charitable and relief organizations of cities, municipalities, and townships. Congressmen Underwood proposes to use the American Legion, and local relief organizations in addition to the Red Cross. The bill provides that the distributing agencies may exchange the wheat for flour and other food products.

MAKE STATEMENT
Congressman Underwood said that, "innocent and suffering men, women and little children, who are in on way responsible for existing conditions, must not go hungry. Our Government has repeatedly gone to the relief of afflicted people of other nations by donations and loans. We have fed the starving people of Germany, Russia, Italy, Japan, and other countries. Until the wheels of industry start, it is our duty to assist in caring for the millions of unfortunate and destitute American citizens who are so urgently in need of the necessities of life. "While we would all prefer that local relief care for the situation, yet conditions are so sad and deplorable that additional Federal help is absolutely necessary at this time."

Democrats Assailed As Snell Praises President

"Not Fit to Govern," Is Republican Permanent Chairman's Term.

BY GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

STADIUM, CHICAGO, June 15.—The course which the Republican party proposes to follow in the 1932 campaign was plainly charted today.

Boiled down, it amounts to this: That the Democratic party is "not fit to govern," and if the country is to be brought back out of the depression depths it must be through Republican agencies.

That is the Republican theme song for the campaign. The first note of it was sounded by Senator L. J. Dickinson of Iowa, the convention keynoter, and the cymbals crashed into the symphony today through Rep. Bertrand E. Snell of New York as he took over the permanent chairmanship of the convention.

"HAS SAVED NATION"
Dickinson told the delegates that Mr. Hoover alone had saved the country from panic and collapse. Snell went further—he told the convention that only by following the president's leadership will the country emerge from the economic morass in which it has floundered for three years. "The way to restore good times," Snell said, "is to restore them. And the Republican party has set itself resolutely on that course."

"With indomitable courage and confidence, with faith in our com-

Garfield of Ohio or Sanders of Indiana May Lead Hoover's Campaign.

CHICAGO, June 15.—The choice of a new Republican national chairman was reported to have narrowed today to James R. Garfield, of Ohio, or Everett Sanders, of Indiana, with the possibility however that a "dark horse" may get the post if a deadlock develops.

International News Service learned from a reliable source that two cabinet members, frequently mentioned for the honor, would not be candidates for it. They were Secretary of War Hurley and Postmaster General Brown.

William M. Butler, of Massachusetts, whose name was mentioned, was eliminated from the picture when the Massachusetts delegation declined to name him to the national committee.

Several months ago, it was reported that friends of the president urged him to consider managing Mr. Hoover's campaign this year. The offer, though, was not renewed after Butler was beaten in his own delegation.

Eulogistic speeches are made in all political conventions, but it is probably safe to say that few conventions have listened to such a paean of praise as Rep. Snell sounded for President Hoover today.

"Fellow Republicans: You have done me the honor of asking me to preside over the convention that is about to name the next President of the United States."

I thank you for the trust thus imposed.

The Republican party is accustomed to victory. From Abraham Lincoln, our first Republican president, the Republican party has elected eleven of the thirteen presidents.

Victory has come to the Republican party because victory has been earned.

Our doctrines and policies have been hammered out on the anvil of experience.

Rev. David McDonald, former rector of St. Philip's Episcopal church, W. Mound-st., and for the past nine years rector of St. John's Episcopal church at Lancaster, has resigned his position there and returned to his former home in Boston.

It is said that nervous breakdown was given as the reason for the resignation. It is understood that Rev. McDonald plans to rest for a year before returning to the ministry.

He returned to Boston last week leaving his resignation to be read to the Lancaster congregation. On Sunday, June 5, special services at St. John's church in Lancaster commemorated the 20th anniversary of Rev. McDonald's ordination. He went to Lancaster from this city in March, 1923.

Plans for selection of his successor at Lancaster have not yet been completed.

House Vote on Bill Expected Today

BULLETIN

The House of Representatives, Wednesday, by a vote of 209 to 176 passed the Patman-Thomas bill for immediate payment of the World War veterans' compensation certificates.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Five hundred bonus marchers left Washington homeward bound in district trucks this afternoon twelve hours after the Sixth Regiment of Marines quit giving them hospital service.

Many more were expected to take advantage of the offer of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York to come home to the Empire state on railway tickets provided by the governor. Nearly one hundred New York state marchers had been registered and had received tickets at noon, and were continuing to line up around the agent sent down by the Governor to register the men and give them train tickets.

"TIDE HAS CHANGED"
Police officials said "tide had changed." They predicted the next several days would see a general evacuation on the part of the marchers.

The five hundred men who left in trucks were provided with two days' ration of food and will be transported fifty miles outside the city. The group included men from Tennessee, Georgia, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, New York and Alabama.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Soldiers' bonus legislation was speeded toward a final decision today.

With the House Prepared to pass the Patman-Thomas bill for cash payment of the $2,400,000,000 bonus today, Senate leaders disclosed plans for hasty action in that body.

Admittedly facing odds, both the legislation leaders in the bonus fight and captains of the bonus army resumed the battle with a determination to force a complete showdown.

Sorrow had touched both the House and the thousands of veterans who braved hardships to march on the capital. The House mourned Rep. Edward E. Eslick (D) of Tennessee, who suffered a fatal heart attack in the Chamber while making a plea for the bill. The bonus marchers sorrowed for Roy T. Schwartzinger of New Kensington, Pa., who died in a hospital of pneumonia.

House leaders planned to advance final action on the Patman-Thomas bill to permit members of the Tennessee delegation to leave late today to attend the funeral of Rep. Eslick.

ATTACK MINERS

ADENA, June 15.—Masked and armed with clubs and stones, a gang of 15 men attacked a bus carrying 17 miners to work at the Ohio & Pennsylvania mine at Adena near here today.

Windows of the bus were shattered by a hail of stones, but no one was seriously injured as the bus rushed through the gauntlet of assailants. Unable to identify the masked assailants, authorities arrested no one in connection with the incident.

At the mine, however, which was guarded by pickets, authorities arrested Carl Albright, 25, of Jewett, on charges of inciting to riot.

Forty-nine men went to work in the O. & P. mine this morning.

SURGEON IS KILLED

COLUMBUS, June 15.—Dr. E. M. Freese, 45, a member of the surgical staff of Grant Hospital, here, accidentally shot and killed himself while cleaning a revolver at a ranch near Medina, N.D., according to word received here today.

It did admit that there had been a "change." But he pointed out that if anything was wrong, it was mainly due to the war and the last democratic administration.

Buy by jimmies. Senator Dickinson made it clear that the grand old party is openly and unreservedly against crime. The party's against crime more than anything else—unless you count Democrats that Iowa lawyer keynoted that crime in this country ought to be stopped.

CLASSIFIED TAX FAILS; CITY BROKE

Only 21 Per Cent of Last Year's Collection is Reported by Auditor

FUNDS UNAVAILABLE

Number of Personal Returns Is Lower

Only 21 percent of last year's collections, or $33,456.45, has been collected in Pickaway-co under the new classified tax law, according to information given out by T. D. Krinn, deputy county auditor. Approximately $100,000 should have been collected this year, representing a loss in collections of nearly $130,000.

Reports from other counties are running about 26.7 percent, which shows that Pickaway-co is low with 21.

The indicated failure of the personal tax returns will further accentuate an already difficult tax situation and Circleville may be unable to meet its August payroll.

SETTLEMENT DUE

There is a settlement due from the auditor of state under the pre-rating provision of the new tax law which provides that amounts are to be taken from the counties in which the personal tax returns are large and pro-rated among those counties where the collections are under the former personal tax returns.

All of the counties in the state were ordered by the state auditor to send in a report of the tax collections. When all reports have been received a state ratio will be determined. The local county auditor's office is awaiting instructions from the auditor of state to distribute classified personal tax which is based in the state ratio instead of the county.

RATING UNCERTAIN

At the present time the projection is uncertain as reports from Columbus indicate returns from other counties are running only about 26.7 percent.

There has been a total of $14,355.20 collected in classified tax and $19,100.25 in tangible tax at the present time, according to Mr. Krinn.

The number of personal tax returns under the classified law showed a big slump. This year 3,077 returns were collected as compared to 5,174 collected under the old law. This year outstanding are expected while farm chattels are taxed on only 50 percent of the listed value.

Shut Off Gas Saturday 1 P. M.

Circleville's gas supply will be shut off Saturday from 1 to 4 p. m., according to an announcement Wednesday, by George Faust, local manager.

The shut off is necessary in order to complete changes on the line into Circleville.

Since the gas will be entirely off all consumers are requested to see that all their appliances are turned off during that period to prevent possible trouble resulting in personal or property loss.

For additional protection to consumers arrangements have been made for the fire bell to strike 55 at the time of the turn off and again when it is time to again turn the gas on.

The Ohio Fuel Gas Co. is installing a new line east of this city.

MORE FLOUR GIVEN TO CIRCLEVILLE

Another supply of government flour was being distributed to needy families Wednesday morning at the city building by Miss Agnes Butch, secretary of the Red Cross here.

According to Frank A. Lynch, another car load of flour is being sent to Circleville for distribution. It is expected to arrive soon.

JOE MASHIE'S DEAD

Joe Mashie's dead! A sudden stroke Out on the thirteenth green Broke up "the tottering foursome" that For forty years, we've seen, The widow Mashie sighed when friends The body home did bring;

She hadn't seen her Joe but once Since early in the spring. The family sought in solemn groups With heavy thought and frown A wish by Joe of where to lay His bones and putter down.

Then up his widow, true, did speak (Golf widow for many years) She saw her Joe—her Bobbie Boy— And sobbed thus in her tears:

"Carry him where he loved to be And couldn't be enough, Carry him to the Country Club And bury him in the rough."

"He made his home right in the Club To prayers of mine was dumb Golf was his life, his hope on earth And far his kingdom come."

"For eighteen holes he'd sweat and swing To beat one hundred ten; But come 19th no handicap Would Joe be needing then."

"He'd hang around the locker room 'Til all had fled his line, Then from the showers bellow forth His love for Ad-o-line."

"Some after dinner holes he'd stroll His roughed up soul to soothe, And keep his duffer footsteps all Within the fairway smooth."

"His grave dig near the caddy house Far from a church bell's sounds, His headstone just a pile of balls A little out of bounds."

"Bury him bent, but on his feet The stance he used to crave Bury him deep his head to keep When dubs land on his grave."

"In heaven he'll play a long clear swing, No more he'll say he's 'pressed', Bury him with his spiked shoes on— Gone to a golfer's rest."

"Carry him where he loved to be And couldn't be enough, Carry him to the Country Club And bury him in the rough."

NEW YORK, June 15.—The Washington Senators were thankful today to move to Detroit from St. Louis where the rampant Browns all but knocked them out of the pennant race.

The Browns got started with a four-game winning streak last week at the expense of the Red Sox and continued to mop up against the Senators, who have lost seven out of eight starts to the St. Louis crew this season.

Yesterday the Browns slaughtered the Nats 17 to 3, picking Weaver, Marberry and Ragland for 24 hits while Blasholder limited the Senators to seven.

St. Louis now is only half a game out of fourth place in the American league race while Washington Athletics, who downed Detroit again, 10 to 5, Jimmy Fox smacked his 24th and 25th homers and in four up on Babe Ruth which is quite a feat considering that Babe is keeping pace with his record year, 1927.

SNELL'S ADDRESS

We have never shirked responsibility. We have never become a disorganized mob under the pressure of great emergencies.

We have never offered quick remedies for national disorders. By long trial in the actual responsibility of conducting the government, the Republican party has become capable of governing.

CLAIMS CONFUSION
Everywhere outside of the Republican party, is confusion and chaos. The only sound and united public sentiment of the United States is represented in this convention.

The Democratic party is fatally weak and because it is utterly lacking in team work the Democrats have a minority complex which they cannot change. As a fault-finding, cavilling minority opposition they are 100 per cent perfect. As a driving, constructive majority they are a 100 per cent failure.

As proof of this I need not recall to your mind the false gods they have pursued for over a century; the panaceas they have proposed and a wise people have rejected. Events of the past five months furnish abundant evidence of their failure.

Accepting their promises at face value, the country placed them in charge of the House of Representatives. As long as they followed the leadership of the one man in America who has furnished leadership in this great crisis—Herbert Hoover—they functioned in splendid fashion.

But when they set out to carry forward their own program they exhibited colossal incapacity and hopeless division. Had the party alone suffered, the situation would not have been so bad. But it was the country which suffered. In a few months the confidence of the country in the House of Representatives, was utterly destroyed.

And with what consequences? Uncertainty about the future increased; confidence all but disappeared; business continued to slow down. The country was thrown into a state of mind approaching chaos. No one could foretell what the Democratic majority would propose or would do next.

FOLLOWED PRESIDENT
They had the good judgment at first to follow the lead of the president so long as they did, all was well. When they started casting about for a program of their own they became mired.

With this record behind it in this grave hour of national distress, the Democratic party is about to ask the country to accept a candidate whose identity is still unknown, standing upon a platform whose planks will probably contradict themselves. The nation is to be asked to accept confusion as a national policy and disorder as a rule of government.

The Democratic party has as many wings as it has candidates. These wings do not fly together. They flap against each other. The Democratic party is a mob of feuds and of factions unable to bring order out of the chaos in its own ranks. How can it be expected to maintain order in government?

An intelligent order in government is what the American people demand in this crisis. They want a party in control that has a program, knows where it is going, and has the courage, leadership and sense of responsibility to get to its destination.

My countrymen, the solidarity of the Republican party in this crisis means the salvation of the United States. If this country is to be covered with judgment and prudence, the Republican party must do the job.

RECALLS WORK

Call the roll of the presidents from Lincoln to Hoover. The illustrious names of American presidents are an epitome of the history of the United States. Supported by the people and united in a responsible party; they perpetrated the union; they linked the coasts by railroads and opened the west to settlement; they preserved the honor and integrity of American currency; they liberated Cuba and placed the Stars and Stripes over Alaska, the Philippines, Hawaii and Porto Rico; they built the Panama Canal; they created a navy; they brought about a genuine regulation of interstate commerce and suppressed monopolies; they halted the mistaken attempt to involve us in European politics and wars; they ended the naval rivalry of the great powers and compelled recognition of the equality of the navy of the United States; they dealt generously with foreign debtors while protecting American taxpayers; they provided that the United States army should always be ready for mobilization on a scale sufficient to repel any enemy; they prevented the invasion of boarders of immigrants pauperized by the World War; they protected the American farmer, manufacturer, and workman against ruinous competition in the American market; they have fought with stout heart the dreary battle against world wide depression, and thank God, they are on the way to win it.

NO EXPERIMENTS

We do not offer experiments as candidates. We do not offer quick remedies and exploded theories as a platform. We offer to conduct the government on tried principles, to be administered by men who have met the supreme test of intrepid leadership.

In Lincoln's day the people stood loyally by their president, who brought them out of the shadow of disunion. In Hoover's day the people stand loyally by their president, who is bringing the country out of the shadow of vast economic adversity.

The people will not strike down the pilot who keeps eternal vigil on the bridge of the ship of state. Washington as an engineer, solved stupendous and vexatious problems for the benefit of mankind.

NOT POLITICIAN
It was said of Washington then, as it is said of Hoover today, that he was not a politician. But he had the profound political instinct of statesmanship and his statesmanship was good politics. The substratum of Washington's statesmanship was his engineering experience, his practical accomplishments, and his profound human sagacity.

President Hoover's mind is the mind of an engineer. He first gets his facts and then he acts. Sureness of decision, solidity of formation and enduring construction, by using tested materials is ingrained in the education and thought processes of an engineer.

Herbert Hoover, the engineer president of the United States, is solving and will solve stupendous and vexatious problems, as did our first engineer president for the benefit of all mankind.

You know the record. You know the battles he has already won. He solidified labor and capital against the enemy.

He avoided the deadly pit of the dole. He rescued the drought victims.

He beat off the attacks upon railroads, agriculture, banks and public securities.

He muzzled the nation's financial resources.

He ward off the stealthy approach of panic by way of Germany.

He preserved the integrity of the gold standard.

He had the manhood and courage to tell the people that their government's revenues were depleted and must be replenished.

He fought and won the battle of the budget, by resolutely loving off extravagance and by instituting severe economies. Throughout this war the American dollar has been as stable as the American flag.

CONSCIOUS OF WORK

The Republican party is conscious of its responsibility and realizes its stewardship.

As Lincoln once said: "The occasion is piled high with difficulty." Nevertheless the Republican party is equal to the occasion. That party has its plow to the furrow, and is not looking backward. It is now, as ever, the party of rehabilitation.

With indomitable courage and confidence, with faith in our commander in chief and with a comradeship of purpose to meet every foe of the republic, foreign or domestic, let us press onward, shouting the great American battle cry:

"Forward to victory!"

COLUMBUS, June 15.—Application for a writ of mandamus compelling the mayor and city council of Van Wert to immediately proceed to install a sewage disposal plant was made to the Ohio supreme court today.

The application, filed by Attorney General Gilbert Beltman on behalf of Health Director H.G. Southard, urged that the court require the installation of "works and means satisfactory to the director of health for disposing of the sewage of the city in a manner to correct and prevent the pollution of Town Creek caused by such sewage" and to do all other things necessary and proper, effectually to carry out and comply with, the order issued April 15, 1920, by the Ohio public health council, requiring installation of a sewage disposal plant at Van Wert.

This order, which followed a public hearing before the council here Feb. 27, 1920, was based upon the state health department's investigation of complaints lodged by the Van Wert county board of commissioners and by the township of Pleasant township, Van Wert county.

Upon completion of the investigation, the health director, Feb. 21, 1921, announced the following findings: "That sewage from the city of Van Wert, discharged into Town Creek, has so corrupted that stream as to give rise to foul and noxious odors and to conditions detrimental to health and comfort." Beltman also informed the court that on Sept. 4, 1920, the health director received a petition, signed by 57 voters of Pleasant and Hocking townships, Van Wert county, charging that Van Wert city sewage was polluting Town Creek and creating a public nuisance.

Claim was made by the attorney general that the mayor and city council have refused to comply with the health council's order. No date has yet been fixed for a hearing by the court.

All Refunds Under Old Rate Case Fight Have Been Made, Utilities Says.

COLUMBUS, June 15.—The Citizens Telephone Co., of Circleville, was discharged today by the State Utilities Commission of all responsibility under the bond which the company had filed with the commission in connection with its recent rate case.

Disposing of protests against the company's proposals to increase its rate, the commission some weeks ago fixed a new schedule of rate somewhat lower than those proposed by the company.

The bond had been filed pending final disposition of the case for the purpose of insuring to subscribers of the difference between the rates which the company collected and those which the commission fixed.

The commission's action today was based upon an audit which disclosed that the company had completed all refunds to its subscribers and to treasurers of local political subdivisions in cases where repayment to old subscribers could not be affected.

CHAPTER XL

MARY sat perfectly frozen as Buck Landers approached. Was there a new expression on his face—or did she deceive herself that he looked somehow changed? That fleeting smile on his lips... she had rarely seen it there before.

"Good evening, Mary."

He was beside her table, tall and immaculate; Bill was on his feet immediately saying the adequate words in response to the introduction that had come confusedly to cover her surprise—from Mary's bewildered lips. There was dumb amazement on Bill's face—he knew the story of Landers' viciousness; was surprised that the man gave appearance of gentility; was dumbfounded at his effrontery that had every outward appearance of casual friendship for Mary. Not a flicker of hostility crossed the older man's face; his apparel was no more fastidiously correct than his manner.

"New York is a small city, after all—think of meeting you here in the Mortengott house," he said. "Do you remember when we were here together?"

His new attitude inspired a surprise in Mary that counteracted her impulse to repel him. Yes, he had changed... there was a different look in his eyes.

"I haven't forgotten—anything," she returned, searching the mystery of his expression.

Bill, automatically, would have had the waiter bring an extra chair, but Landers, politely, declined to sit. He stirred no alarm in Mary now; she was able to look at him with smiling defiance, a touch of triumph. Oh, he certainly must remember how he had conquered him—how he had once backed away—fed—before the automatic in her nervous hand.

"And so we meet again!" Landers murmured, half smiling. "But I see you are not with Steve this evening—you're not turning fickle, Mary, I trust."

"No, I'm never fickle, Mr. Landers."

His face flushed a little. "I'm awfully glad to see you again, anyway. I'm with some friends and before I go, I wonder if you'd do the old man a favor—would you dance just once with me, Mary?"

The orchestra had begun to permeate the place with its restrained, seductive rhythm; a strange, daring pulse began to beat with curiosity in Mary. For Landers to ask her to dance was grotesque—was funny! What could possibly be in his mind? He was in defeat now, and she had a foolish, unholly yow to know how he was taking it. She would get a thrill out of telling Steve how Landers was taking his beating.

Bill Calvert, mystified, bowed to Landers, and it was returned. He put his arm around her and they went gliding and turning on the crowded floor. She was surprised that he was so excellent at it; the rhythm and their bodies was as one; they danced without error to the music's throbbing beat.

"Is everything going well with you, Mary?"

"Everything is perfect with me, Mr. Landers. All of your efforts to break Steve and me up worked the opposite way. If anything, you brought us closer together."

"But you are with another man?"

"It wasn't convenient for Steve to come out tonight, and he asked Mr. Calvert to bring me. It's just an act of courtesy on Bill's part—it means nothing whatever."

"I've heard Steve speak, in the past, of the Calverts—rich friends of his. They're nice people, Mary—the kind you belong with."

There was silence. Then he said: "I wish you would give Steve a message for me. Tell him I realize that I lost my head, and made a fool of myself. When a man of my age falls for a girl of your age, he's likely to jump the track for a while when things go wrong... Tell Steve I was trying to make water run up hill, and it can't be done. I'm not sore at him any longer—and I don't want either of you to be sore at me—if that is possible."

His voice was chastened, and, when he looked down at her, there was a mildness in his gaze. She thought of an eagle with clipped wings.

"I'll tell Steve what you say. But I doubt if he could ever feel friendly towards you again, Mr. Landers. That's too much to expect, isn't it?"

He nodded. "But tell him not to bear any grudge toward me—a grudge is a mighty poisonous thing. I made a lot of big mistakes, Mary, and I see them as plainly as you do. All I ask of you, little girl, is not to think too harshly of me. My feelings got the better of me—and I lost my head—that's all. If you and I can't be friends, don't let's be enemies."

She felt the heavy thrill of complete victory. "Oh, I'm glad you're so sensible, Mr. Landers. It isn't difficult for me to forgive you because, after all, you did get rather the worst of it. Steve had a lot of physical sufferings and brutal treatment—but he did win out in the end."

The music stopped and Landers released her. The dancers clapped while they were waiting for the encore; Landers touched a silk handkerchief to his brow. A streak of caution warned Mary—if she didn't watch out, she'd be pitying him in a moment.

"And don't you feel better to have all of the struggle out of your system?" she asked, curiously.

They resumed dancing with the music. "I'll never be thoroughly happy without you," he told her unflinchingly. "But you don't want me—and that's that. I'm not going to allow myself to worry about it. But I do feel a lot better to know you don't exactly hate me—it's a weak consolation, but it's something. I don't suppose it would be any use for me to proposition Steve about coming back to work for me anymore?"

"I know he wouldn't. He's going to Cuba on a sugar plantation for a year."

"And you?"

"I'm staying in New York for a year until we get married. Steve wants to get on his feet first."

"He's quite right, Mary. If you ever get lonesome—just ring me up. You'll find me quite harmless now. Being in love with you the way I was, kept me in a mental fever. Thank heaven, I'm back to normal again now. I've—I've quieted down..."

He brought her back to Bill when the music ended, bowed and left them.

At three o'clock in the morning, Bill had her back to the house in the Catskills... It was strange how her love for Steve made her feel so kindly to the whole world, even toward an ex-enemy like Buck Landers... but she mustn't hate anybody now, because Steve was going away so soon, and the remaining days were too short for the happiness she must crowd into them.

Eileen came home and Steve's departure became a fact that drew near with the passing of each day. Mr. Calvert, knowing nothing of the inside, could see only a profitable future for Steve in the sugar business; Bill promised to run down to Cuba in the winter for a visit on the plantation. Eileen was distant, but agreeable. Another week of luxurious living with the Calverts, and Mary found herself back again in Brooklyn. Tomorrow she would take up the search for a position—could she wait in happiness? Life had expended upon her its full blast of cruelty; from now on the skies ought to be smiling and blue. She managed to banish regret at Steve's going; she was uplifted... exalted that he was going out to battle the world for love of her. Nevertheless, on the night he sailed, she wept till dawn.

Mary missed Steve. Without him, New York lost all its magic; the year would pass more quickly, she realized, if she could find the kind of employment that would actually interest her. The employment agency suggested a number of jobs, but they were all office work. There was a proprietor of a book store in the Forties who wanted a secretary who could be capable, also, of meeting customers. Mary applied for and got the job.

She was an excellent stenographer and was paid accordingly; in her spare moments, she was expected to help out the two clerks in the shop. The proprietor, Jacob Woolfe, was not insensible to the value of a pretty girl in his shop to dilute the atmosphere of culture and scholarship created by his two men clerks, who were elderly and bespectacled. Woolfe himself, who seemed almost illiterate in speech, possessed an uncanny knowledge of the world's literature. He was a specialist in rare and old editions which he handled personally.

"We are a happy family here, and we do business with the finest ladies and gentlemen in town," he told Mary. "I want you to study the business and make it so I can't get along without you. That's what I tell all my help. Why don't you make me pay you a hundred dollars a week? I would have to do it, Miss Kennedy, if you was worth it. Anytime you earn a hundred a week here, you'll get it."

He was a marvel of efficiency and shrewdness and had built up a mail-order business that exceeded the shop sales. His immense knowledge of books overwhelmed Mary, but, curiously, he was obscurely intimidated by Mary; he excelled her, of course, in shrewdness, but he seemed to sense in her a basic kind of intelligence that he lacked himself. He was fat and carelessly clothed; her slim, smart youthfulness gave him a feeling of coarseness and vulgarity that puzzled him, and kept him half apologetic in his relations with her. After the first day, Mary thought this was the best job she had ever had in her life.

Steve's letter came to her twice a week for a while, and then dropped to once a week.

"Every day here is hot as the devil, and when I come home at night I'm dog tired," he wrote. "They tell me I won't mind the Summer heat so much after I get acclimated. It's all new to me, but I'm simply enchanted with the crudeness and barbarity of it all—it's the opportunity in the raw. On Sundays we rest and from now on I shall devote most of the day to writing a long weekly letter."

He made no mention of Eileen Calvert being there, and for the present Mary had no worry on that score. Eileen was too wise to present herself in the blistering heat of mid-summer to a fatigued and perspiring young man. Her attack would be withheld until the cooler season. No, Mary had no need, so far, to worry.

She was back now, rooming at her old place in the Eighties. Inasmuch as she expected to stay right there for the balance of the year, she tried to make the room more cheerful with cretonne curtains which she bought herself. A domestic impulse stirred her, and she used needle and scissors to make slip cover for her two chairs; a cot, masquerading by day as a sofa, replaced the iron bed. From now on, the room would be a snug little home until Steve returned. She seldom went out evenings, since it was pleasant to stay in with a book and dream of Steve. Bill took her to the theatre and dinner twice; then he left for Europe with his mother and father. Eileen, too, went abroad.

Jacob Woolfe encouraged Mary to read and allowed her to take books home from the shop. With thousands of volumes to select from, she invariably chose books of travel. When she was married to Steve they would probably live in foreign parts, and she was engrossed with the descriptions and pictures of strange places. Oh, life was going to be wonderful!

When a Child Has Fever, Trouble In Breathing, Look Out for Empyema

Accumulation of Pus in the Lung Cavity, Which Can Be Discovered by X-Ray or Tapping, Is a Serious Danger That Demands Immediate Attention.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health for New York City.

WHEN infection takes place, causes pus to accumulate within the lining of the chest, we have a condition known as empyema. It sometimes follows pneumonia or pleurisy, but it may occur independently of these diseases.

Normally the lung in which the pus is accumulated contains a serous fluid, but when infection occurs this fluid is replaced by accumulated pus. This may become so abundant and thick as to interfere with the normal expansion of the lungs.

The affected person, usually a child, looks pale and has difficulty in breathing. There is fever, which rises and falls, and this peculiar temperature curve is spoken of as a septic temperature. It is due to the absorption into the blood stream of poisons from the empyema.

If an X-ray picture is taken of the infected lung a shadow is seen when pus is present, but if this test is not available, the diagnosis of empyema can be confirmed by tapping the chest walls.

This is a much simpler procedure than it sounds, and it does not require moving the patient to a hospital. It is performed by inserting a long hollow needle through the skin and tissue into the suspected area. If empyema is present, pus will be obtained and it may be necessary to repeat the procedure, because the pus is sometimes so thick that it cannot flow readily through the needle. If pus is found and the patient runs a septic temperature, with signs of difficult breathing, an operation may be advisable. This should not be delayed because it is important that the pus be removed as soon as possible. Otherwise the pus may break through the lung tissue and reach a large bronchial tube. In that case, when the patient coughs he will expectorate foul, thick, offensive material.

This condition is followed by various complications. Instead of reaching a bronchial tube, the pus may spread and break into other organs or tissues, and form many abscesses. Then surgical attention is required in order to establish drainage immediately, so that pus in the body may be permitted to escape. This is accomplished by an incision so that the pus can be evacuated, with provision for its complete removal by drains. In severe cases it may be necessary to remove a part of one or two ribs.

When the pus is removed the compressed lung is able to expand, and there is no longer difficulty in breathing. The color becomes better and the temperature soon returns to normal. Convalescence is rapid in these operated cases. Complications occur only in cases where operation is delayed.

The operation for empyema can be performed in the home, but when a hospital is available it is advisable to remove the patient there, since the facilities and care received in the hospital and in a quick and complete recovery.

Team," their new Fox starring vehicle is winning new and greater laurels for them during its local showings at the Grand Theatre, this week.

Many critics and film fans are rating their present picture even higher than its marvelous predecessor while the popularity of both film and stars are being attested by the crowds that are in daily attendance at the Grand Theatre.

Dealing as it does with the struggles of two ambitious and optimistic youngsters whose aspirations are to become New York's leading ballroom dance team, the adventures and disappointment they meet and overcome and their battle to hold on to that elusive "Million-dollar success, once they have achieved it, "Dance Team" has much of the warm sympathy and humanness, the tears and smiles, of "Bad Girl," in addition to a certain charm that is distinctly its own.

The new Garbo picture, which will open today at the Cliftona Theatre is a filmization of the New York dramatic hit by the noted Italian playwright, Luigi Pirandello, with dialogue continuity by Gene Markey. George Fitzmaurice who recently scored with his production of "Mata Hari," again directed Miss Garbo in "As You Desire Me."

The star is supported by Melvyn Douglas, who made his film debut opposite Gloria Swanson in "Ten Nights of a Deuce," the celebrated character actor, Eric Von Stroheim, Owen Moore, Heddie Hopner, Rafaela Ottiano, Warburton Gamble, Albert Conti, William Ricciardi and Roland Varno.

GOVERNMENT CROP REPORT OF JUNE SHOWS POOR PROSPECTS

Crop prospects in Ohio were not as favorable on June 1 as a month earlier. Rainfall has been well below normal during the past four months although the greatest deficiency is in the southern half of the state.

While precipitation from January through May this year is below that of the drought year of 1930 it is likewise above the total for this period in 1931 when crop yields were far above average. There has, however, been a serious lack of rainfall during the past two months which has been quite detrimental to spring sown crops. Light rains since June 1 brought temporary relief in some localities. Corn is making good progress even though moisture is lacking.

The condition of winter wheat on June 1 at 84 per cent indicates a crop of 31,160,000 bushels compared with the large 1931 crop of 50,534,000 bushels and the 5-year average of 26,951,000 bushels. Ohio is the only state in the North Atlantic and East North Central area that shows a 1932 winter wheat crop above average. Some fields are thin and many headed out rather short while others promise high yields.

Oats have suffered severely from the dry weather which is shown by the June 1 condition of 72 per cent or 9 points below average. Oats were slow in germinating because of dry weather and many fields are spotted and thin and are heading out very short. Fields that were sown at a more favorable time, however, promise fairly good yields.

The rye crop is estimated at 700,000 bushels or 26 per cent above average. Barley is reported at 76 per cent of normal or 7 points below the 10-year average condition.

Tame hay and pastures are badly in need of rain, some fields taking on a parched appearance as is often seen in mid-summer. The June 1 condition of tame hay was 70 per cent or 10 points below average while pastures showed a 72 per cent condition and 13 points below average.

Fruit prospects are only fair. The March freezes caused considerable damage especially to peaches in the southern fruit counties. Most of the trees which bore heavily last year will produce light crops. Many trees showed a fairly good bloom but the set has been rather light. Apple condition is reported at 49 per cent on June 1 compared with an average of 64 per cent. Peaches with a June 1 condition of 44 per cent indicates a crop of 1,020,000 bushels or 28 per cent below average. Pears promise an average crop with condition at 54 per cent and production forecast at 348,000 bushels. Cherry condition on June 1 was 55 per cent of normal.

June Average June 1 1932 compared with 1926-1930 1931-1932 1931

No. of Hens and Pullets of laying age per farm:

Production per cow in herd (1 day):
12.5 20.3 19.7 -3.0%
Per cent of cows dry:
19 20 19

Egg production per 100 hens on farms of Ohio crop reporters June 1 was 3.8 per cent less than the same time last year and 3.4 per cent less than the 5-year average (1926-1930). This decreased egg production was also accompanied by 1.1 per cent fewer hens and pullets of laying age on farms.

Milk production per cow in herd was 3.0 per cent less than one year ago and 2.5 per cent less than the 5-year average. The per cent of cows dry was 19 per cent this year compared with 20 per cent last year and 19 per cent, the 5-year average.

FOR THE UNITED STATES

The condition of winter wheat was 12 points below the ten-year average condition for June, while spring wheat, oats, barley, rye, hay and pastures ranged from 2 to 8 points below average. The southern peach crop will be small. Milk production per cow was lower on June 1 than on that date last year, but this was offset by more cows being milked. The production of eggs was about 3 per cent smaller per hen than a

'PROTECTION,' STORY OF LAWYER POWER, SHOWN AT DARBYVILLE

If a boy kills—if booze did it—should the bootlegger pay the cost? Is he liable for civil damages?

What is the law concerning the responsibility of the bootlegger and his customers for what may follow an illegal sale of liquor?

Section 20 of the Volstead Act provides: "Any person who shall be injured in person, property, means of support, or otherwise by any intoxicated person, or by reason of the intoxication of any person whether resulting in his death or not, shall have a right of action against any person who shall, by unlawfully selling to or unlawfully assisting in procuring liquor for such intoxicated person, have caused or contributed to such intoxication, and in any such action such person shall have a right to recover actual and exemplary damages."

All this is set forth in "Protection," which is a dramatic presentation in the form of a trial conducted just as trials at the Court House are conducted.

This presentation of the present-day conditions as to the illegal liquor traffic, the enforcement of prohibition laws, and the attitude of some society people with regard to drinking, will be given at the Methodist Episcopal church at Darbyville, Sunday, June 19th at 8 p. m.

Twenty-six persons, all of them living in this community, except one, will be in the cast which will give the dramatic trial. The one exception is a representative of the Anti-Saloon League of Ohio. He will act the part of plaintiff's attorney.

The local players, with their parts, are as follows:

Judge, William Beatty.
Clerk of the Courts not decided.
United States Marshal, Z. L. Smith.
Court Reporter, Evelyn Christensen.
Defense Attorney, Bernard Redman.
Plaintiff, Mrs. Mary Wilson, Mrs. Roy White.
Defendant, George Bond, Rev. W. B. Rose.

SHIPS TO TRAVEL
'300 PER EXPECTED

CLEVELAND, June 14.—Russell Boardman, co-holder of the world's non-stop endurance record, predicted during a visit here that at least five of the entrants in the 1932 renewal of the Thompson trophy race, classic of the National Air Races, will be flying ships capable of more than 300 miles per hour.

The New York-to-Istanbul pilot will be one of the five, he said. Granville Brothers, makers of the famous Gee Bee Super Sportster in which Lowell Bayles, Springfield, Mass., speed king, captured the 1931 100-mile event, are building Boardman's craft.

Modeled along the design of Bayles' craft, in which he later was killed at Detroit after establishing a new American land speed mark, Boardman's Gee Bee is expected to have a maximum speed of well over 300 miles per hour. Bayles touched 284 with the wind over a mile straightaway in his Super Sportster.

Boardman did not state who the other four flyers would be, but Major James A. (Jimmy) Doolittle, winner of the Bendix trophy dash across the continent, is expected to be back with his tiny green and black Laird biplane. He is tuning up its speed to better than 300, he says. The ship averaged 223 miles an hour from coast to coast last year, including several stops.

FLY SPRAY

Dairymen may relieve their cows from annoyance and also avoid a great deal of discomfort in taking care of the herd through the preparation of fly sprays.

The following combinations have given very satisfactory results:

Laundry Soap, 1 Pound;
Crude Petroleum, 1 Gallon;
Powdered Naphthalin, 3 Ounces;
Water, 3 Gallons.

Another formula may be prepared from:

Coal Tar Dip, 3-4 Quart;
Fish Oil, 3-4 Quart;
Oil of Tar, 1-2 Pint;
Kerosene, 1 Pint;
Oil of Pennyroyal, 1-4 Pint.

Mix in five gallons of water in which one-half bar of laundry soap has been dissolved.

These sprays are repellent to flies and leaves the coats of the animals in good condition.

GIBBONS

You know, it just occurs to me that Congressmen who hold those sentiments are exposing the country and the people to a blast of real "Red" propaganda.

Just suppose Moscow took advantage of the opening which the American Congress offer them. Suppose Moscow, tomorrow, broadcast to the world the intention of the offer of the Soviet union to send food, supplies and general relief to starving American veterans in Washington.

Suppose Moscow made the gesture in return for the hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of American relief which Mr. Hoover distributed to starving Russians during the Russian famine. If the capable propagandists of Moscow took advantage of such an opportunity, then the American congress and the administration would be confronted with some real 'Red' propaganda.

There was neither food nor words for the hungry of America in today's proceedings of the National Republican convention.

PRAYER OFFERED BY BISHOP AT OPENING OF CONVENTION

CHICAGO, June 15.—The following prayer was offered by the Right Reverend James E. Feenan, D. D., L. L. D., Bishop of Washington, D. C., at the opening of the Republican national convention Tuesday.

"Almighty God, our heavenly father, in whose hands are the issues of men and of nations, we bow in humble reverence before Thee, and with grateful hearts acknowledge Thy manifold blessings to us as a people. Through all the changed and changing circumstances of life Thou hast made and preserved us a nation. Where we have been obedient to Thy will, Thou hast favored us. Where we have pursued our selfish aims, Thou hast justly punished us. With chastened humility we confess our vaunted pride, our boasted security and our avowed self-dependence. In our conceit we have trusted to our own strength and forgotten that Thou alone art the source of all peace and all abiding happiness.

"In the time of our distress we cry unto Thee: 'God be merciful to us, sinners.' Give us freshened courage, renewed hope, a clearer vision of our duty to Thee and our fellow men. Restore to us as a people, honorable industry, sound learning and pure manners. Save us from violence and lawlessness, discord and confusion.

"Imbue with the spirit of wisdom those to whom in Thy name we entrust the authority of government, that there may be justice and peace at home and that, through obedience to Thy law, we may show forth Thy praise among the nations of the earth."

"In the days of shadow, give us to see the way that shall lead us into paths of wholesome living. In all the plans and deliberations of this convention do Thou guide us in the course that shall be for the highest good of all of our people. With renewed faith in Thee, we invoke Thy blessing upon our nation, and especially do we pray for those upon whose hearts and minds burdens have been laid too heavy to be borne. Give us the mind and the will and the aid of Thy divine assistance that these burdens may be removed. In Thy mercy hasten the day of restored confidence, relieved anxiety and the just reward of labor. In the time of prosperity fill our hearts with thankfulness and in the day of trouble suffer not our trust in Thee to fail; all of which we ask through him who for our sakes became poor that we through his poverty might be made rich, our Savior, Jesus Christ. Amen"
